

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHY

Catarina Norell
Sustainability Manager
Volvo Group Purchasing

I have a background in engineering and software development, with experience across the medical, electronics, and automotive industries.

Since joining Volvo Group in 2002, I have worked in R&D on Field Operation Tests and large-scale data collection to support the development of vehicle safety systems. Through my involvement in environment, health, and safety initiatives, I developed a strong interest in sustainability and the role of data, processes, and cross-functional collaboration in driving compliance and continuous improvement.

Over the years, I have taken on leadership roles in introducing new processes and systems, with a focus on connecting technology and business needs to create practical and scalable solutions.

Today, as Sustainability Manager, I lead work focused on reducing environmental footprint in the supply chain, with a particular interest in substances of concern, regulatory readiness, and material data transparency.
